Happy New Year

It's time again to think about resolutions for the New Year. For photographers, keeping track of photos is a constant task. Some people are better than others in doing this. If you haven't developed a system of organizing your photos, start it now or else you will fall behind another year before you do. With snapshots on film, do something that identifies each roll along with the date. For pictures with people in them, try to identify them, especially those who you don't see very often. It's not as easy with digital photos. Where do you write this kind of stuff? One possibility is on the sheet of thumbnails that is printed for these photos. You don't print thumbnails? Then work out another method of recording this data. It's also a good idea to retitle the photos so that you don't have a whole bunch of DSC00xx's rattling around on your hard drives and CDs. Individual titles aren't necessary but work out something that helps to identify each group.

Make backups. It bears repeating. It shouldn't take too long. Use good quality CDs and DVDs. Identify them using the proper marking pens. I lost a couple of CDs because of this so I'm more careful now.

Finally, add this to your list of New Year's resolutions.

Hunt

It is time to start your collection of images for the annual Scavenger Hunt, which is due by May 22, 2006. Remember that the images must have been captured since Jan 05, and can receive only minor alterations, not major changes to the important image elements.

Subjects must be photographed within 3 miles of the Pacific Ocean between the US borders. The first letter of their name or description must start with one of the following letters:

- | | | |
|------|------|---------------------------------|
| 1. A | 7. Q | 13. Picture of the photographer |
| 2. G | 8. S | Not to be used for judging |
| 3. L | 9. V | |
| 4. M | 10.W | |
| 5. N | 11.X | |
| 6. P | 12.Z | |
